

Human flow

Human flow is a documentary by Ai Weiwei. He is a Chinese performer, photographer, architect, sculptor and blogger.

He filmed during 1 year, 23 countries and show us men and women who are suffering all over the world. This is the most important migratory flow since World War II.

It's a very good idea from the teachers to show us this documentary which depicts more than 65 millions of people that are forced to leave their countries to run away from starvation, war or global warming.

We are old enough to know what's happening in the world and we can't ignore it anymore. Our world has changed, the humanity has changed. We are watching millions of people, men, women, children losing everything and being reduce to a statute that a human being shouldn't have. They are looking for a better life, they are going through over populated refugees camp, dangerous trek in sea to finally face up the refusal at the border. They are wandering the road at random without knowing what will happen tomorrow.

This movie made us realize that the situation for some people in our world is not as pleasant as ours and as a citizen of the world we have to wake up and be able to welcome them if they need help no matter their culture background or their religion.

I can't give you more reasons to watch this documentary as long as you are a human being you need to see it and to take a time to think about your own role and what you could do to make things better.
